MEN TO KEEP YOU WARM

THE MAN WHO STAYED FOR WINTER

TUESDAY.

He came over for one drink. By Friday his toothbrush was in my glass and his records were in my shelf. A diary of the week the cold came and nobody left.

THURSDAY, 9:15 A.M.

Up before me, drinking water by the washing machine in my T-shirt and nothing else. He'd already done the laundry. I may have to marry him.

EXCLUSIVE

THE INTERVIEW

VLACKNEON

He grew up by the sea in Baja California Sur, came of age at Mexico City parties, and now lives in a big old house in downtown Guadalajara. Since 2021 he's been turning the camera on himself, usually with nothing on. We sat him down on his favorite piece of furniture to talk about shame, freedom and the double standard.

1:30 p.m.
Subject stretches. Makes no attempt to get up. NEITHER DO I.
